SIO as Advocate for Change: Strategies for Success
William Lacy,
University of California, Davis

1. Ensure full support by the senior leadership;
2. Involve all levels in the university in the internationalization efforts;
3. Develop close relationships with all the senior academic leadership;
4. Partner with the deans and the department chairs;
5. Work closely with several of the non-academic senior leadership;
6. Locate office in close proximity to the other relevant senior academic and administrative offices;
7. Seek the advice from colleagues across the country and overseas;
8. Hire good people at all levels;
10. Don’t take yourself too seriously and maintain a good sense of humor;
11. Be realistic but don’t stop dreaming.
